

Characteristics of Historical Fiction

Definition: Imagined stories set in the real world that portrays life as it might have been lived in the past, and focuses on the problems and issues of life in the past

Characteristics
<ul style="list-style-type: none">● Imagined story, but set in the real world● Has narrative structure of with characters, plot and setting● Portrays life as it might have been lived in the past● Focuses on problems and issues of life in the past
Often:
<ul style="list-style-type: none">● Has convincing and believable characters, plot and setting● Based on real people or events from the past● Connected to the author's own personal experiences● Begins as contemporary fiction but has been around long enough to acquire historical significance● Uses old-fashioned dialogue● Communicates important understandings of history

Characteristics of Historical Fiction

Definition: Imagined stories set in the real world that portrays life as it might have been lived in the past, and focuses on the problems and issues of life in the past

Characteristics
<ul style="list-style-type: none">● Imagined story, but set in the real world● Has narrative structure of with characters, plot and setting● Portrays life as it might have been lived in the past● Focuses on problems and issues of life in the past
Often:
<ul style="list-style-type: none">● Has convincing and believable characters, plot and setting● Based on real people or events from the past● Connected to the author's own personal experiences● Begins as contemporary fiction bu has been around long enough to acquire historical significance● Uses old-fashioned dialogue● Communicates important understandings of history